The Pass of Brander is the name applied to a narrow reach of Loch Awe. This passage finally resolves itself into the River Awe, a water connection, although not navigable, being thereby made with Loch Etive and the open sea. The water is hemmed in by lofty mountains, chief of which is Ben Cruachan, 3,689 feet.

The Pass of Brander is the name applied to a narrow reach of Loch Awe. This passage finally resolves itself into the River Awe, a water connection, although not very large, being a tributary with Loch Etive and the sea. The water is hemmed in by lofty mountains, chief of which is Ben Cruachan, 3,689 feet.

You will be sorry
to hear dear Mr.
Knead passed
away 6/10
this morning.
Peritonitis I understand. He is buried in
the church
yard. His grave is marked with a simple
stone.
